

ABOUT US

Our Mission

Our website was set up in 2019 by families of those arrested in #theknock. Most are partners or parents of men who have viewed child sex abuse material (CSAM) online. We were left floundering and it is our mission to help families be better informed.

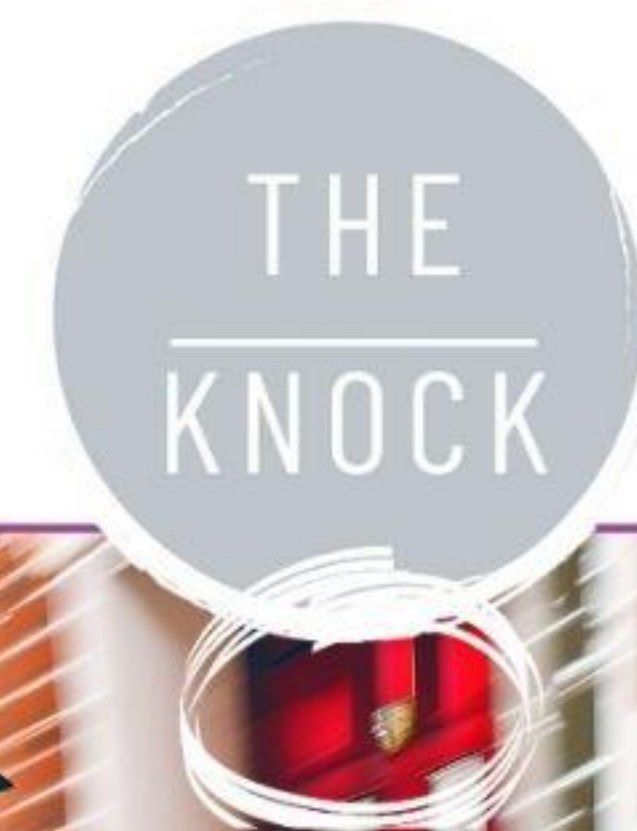

Our Vision

We envisage busting myths educating families, the police, charities, schools, the media, social services, government and the general public about the truth for those arrested for CSAM-only offences and their families.

Important Information

- To minimise the impact of PTSD, managing the first 24-72 hours is vital.
- Don't panic and rush to solve the problem. This is a marathon and what you do now will have repercussions later.
- Read the content on our website: <https://theknock.club/>
- Speak to knowledgeable professionals only. See Help section on website.
- Regular counsellors with no experience in this area can often make things worse.
- Be very careful who you tell as you may regret this later.
- Most people arrested for this offence have not committed a sexual contact offence.
- Porn addiction is a common pathway to CSAM. It is not a 1:1 ratio with paedophilia.

Busting Myths

Traditionally the only narrative around people who use CSAM was paedophilia. But it isn't that simple. It is complex spectrum and many offenders do not have a primary sexual attraction to children.

How did we get here?

People Like You

Individuals who have experienced similar situations have shared blogs and stories of hope, and they also offer both group and one-on-one services.

The Growing Epidemic

Individuals struggling with hidden porn addiction will likely encounter CSAM unexpectedly on popular pornographic mainstream websites.

Maladaptive Coping Mechanisms

Pornography is addictive and becoming progressively deviant. Curiosity drives regular viewing of CSAM, online communication, and sharing. This behaviour acts as a maladaptive coping mechanism to stress and unmet intimacy needs.

Online Internet Offences

CSAM and communication offences have become an epidemic in today's internet landscape.

By bringing attention to this explosion, we strive to diminish fear, enhance understanding, foster open dialogue, and educate our children to help prevent future offences.
